Capital Campaign
Recharges for Final Stage

Youth In Need is poised to move forward to complete its So Every Child Has a Future Capital Campaign by August 31, 2008.

The Capital Campaign has been an exciting project for Youth In Need. The $3.5 million goal is almost complete and efforts to date have brought Youth In Need closer together as an agency. The new Scheidegger Family Youth In Need Center is fully operational and has allowed the agency to consolidate programs and services into one location. Enhanced by the fantastic Monsanto Fund Science Discovery Garden, a new Excel classroom for Emergency Shelter residents and office and recreational space for Head Start families, the new building has brought the organization together like never before.

When Youth In Need’s Board of Directors, campaign leadership and executive staff began looking toward the organization’s future while planning for the Capital Campaign several years ago, they agreed that the Campaign must include not only a new central office for the agency, but it also must create an Endowment Fund to sustain the organization into the future. The Endowment Fund allows Capital Campaign donors to give gifts of cash, securities, deferred gifts and pledges to the organization that then will be held in perpetuity. This is a wonderful way to invest in Youth In Need’s future, giving donors another avenue to support the agency’s mission through the Campaign.

Whether through gifts to the building fund and renovations or to the Endowment Fund, supporting the So Every Child Has a Future Capital Campaign is an opportunity to invest in Youth In Need’s important work, because when young people believe they have a future, life changes.

For more information about the So Every Child Has a Future Capital Campaign, visit online at www.youthinneed.org or call Marisano Pulzula, Youth In Need’s Vice President of Development and Marketing, at 636-946-5600, ext. 254.

2008 Celebration of Youth
Breaks Another Record

Youth In Need held its 21st annual Celebration of Youth gala on March 15 in the Discovery Ballroom at the new Ameristar Casino Resort Spa.

This year’s event honored Brenda and Maurice Newberry, owners of the St. Charles-based The Newberry Group, Inc., and more than 500 community leaders, stakeholders and Youth In Need supporters turned out to celebrate and honor the Newberrys.

Through the sale of tickets, sponsorships and items purchased in both the live and silent auctions, Youth In Need raised more than $175,000! The agency raised an additional $144,000 in pledges for the Missouri State Tax Credit Program at the event. Funds raised will help Youth In Need continue to provide programs and services that help children, teens and families achieve their goals and build a positive future.

Silent and live auction item highlights included airline tickets, sports memorabilia, a bevy of beautiful baskets, a 60-bottle wine cellar collection, fine jewelry, a suite at a Cardinals game and a custom-built dollhouse. Youth In Need also extends a sincere thanks to the Celebration of Youth Cabinet, community members and the Newberrys for making this year’s event a great success!

Have your or your family ever been touched by Youth In Need’s services?

National Review Calls Agency Innovative, Creative, Committed

Youth In Need recently participated in its national Council on Accreditation (COA) re-accreditation site visit. Four volunteer peer reviewers visited Youth In Need’s programs in order to evaluate the agency for re-accreditation. The re-accreditation process occurs every four years, and Youth In Need has been accredited since 2004.

COA accreditation is a rigorous process, where the agency must meet hundreds of standards of excellence for both administrative practices and programs. Youth In Need submitted a comprehensive self-study to COA in January 2008. This self-study, results of questionnaires and the results of Youth In Need’s site visit are all reviewed to ensure the agency’s implementation of COA’s standards. Meetig these standards and receiving accreditation tells clients, donors and other key stakeholders that Youth In Need is committed to providing the highest quality services.

The reviewers wrapped up their visit with an exit interview and praised Youth In Need for its professionalism, responsiveness to clients, and respect for clients. They also praised Youth In Need’s emphasis on positive expectations versus rules that were handled so well that it could set a national example.

The program is very well-preserved as the agency’s first program. Youth In Need’s emphasis on positive expectations versus rules is unique.

The agency has a very strong history of clean financial audits, which builds trust with staff and in the community.

The level of Board involvement is impressive, and the CEO is well-respected.

Staff practices very ethical fundraising and does great work.

A Message from the President & CEO

Dear Friends:

We sometimes hear people who grow up in an earlier era tell of a slower-paced life, a time when neighbors used to keep an eye on each other’s kids far more than happens now. There’s no doubt that today’s fast-paced society creates too many short-handled children and families. Parents face pressures to work longer hours, take extra jobs to keep up with expenses, juggles responsibilities, spend more time in traffic, all while trying to keep their lives in balance.

Youth In Need was founded 34 years ago to help families whose lives were in such crisis that their teenager ran away from home. We’re still helping families and teens who are having severe conflict. In fact, we’re providing more crisis counseling and emergency shelter services to children, teens and parents than ever. But Youth In need also is doing more than ever to help families stay out of crisis and keep their lives in balance.

For example, our Out-of-School Time Program provides supervision and educational activities both before- and after-school for children in low-income neighborhoods whose parents are working long hours. This program helps children be successful in school while supporting parents who know that their children are safe while they are working so hard to get ahead.

Another way we are helping families keep in balance is with our counseling services. Our team of professional counselors is seeing a record number of families, and it most instances parents and children find they are able to handle their challenges on their own after a few meetings. We also have increased access to telephone crisis counseling. As parents and teens quickly get help during an immediate crisis, can be prevented from going from bad to worse, and families can get direction about the kind of follow-up help they need.

Our newest program is one that enlists the help of people in the community to help kids who may be in crisis and also to prevent a crisis from developing. Youth In need is the agency that coordinates Project Safe Place in the greater St. Louis region. Safe Place is a national program that equips people and places in the community with basic knowledge of how to help kids that are in or at-risk of crisis. By agreeing to become a Safe Place location, a business, church or community setting displays the yellow Safe Place logo, and their staff are trained on what to do if they learn that a child or teen may be in an unsafe situation. The training is simple: Make the child comfortable and call Youth In need, whose professional staff will make sure the situation is resolved and that the child gets to safety. Youth In need also provides information to children through presentations at their schools and groups about Safe Place and how they or their friends can use a Safe Place site to get help.

Project Safe Place was established primarily so that teens who are runaways or victims of abuse or bullying violence can be helped right in their neighborhoods. Through Safe Place, Youth In need has been able to lead children and teens to safety who otherwise may never have been helped.

But Safe Place also can be the helpful eyes of the community, recreating a bygone era of neighborhood watch groups. In the past few months, our Safe Place program has helped two children who, through a communication mix-up, were in a crisis. In one instance, a young teen walked to a Safe Place site, recognizing the sign and asking for help because his parent did not pick him up as expected. In another situation, a Safe Place site recognized a “lost” child and called Youth In need. In both instances, Youth In need staff resource the children and reached their parents, who were very relieved.

These are just a few of Youth In need’s many efforts to help families with the challenges of raising children in a fast-paced society. We want to thank you for your support of Youth In Need from the bottom of our hearts. We are committed to continue its mission “…to provide nurturing environments and educational opportunities for children, youth and families who find safety and hope, achieve their goals, and build a positive future.”

Jim Brauch
President & CEO

Make Your Charitable Gift to Youth In Need Work for You

Youth In need is grateful for your generous support of the agency’s efforts to help children, teens and families reach their fullest potential. Without your support, Youth In need’s successes wouldn’t be as great. And because your gift makes a difference to those we serve, we want you to know that your gift also makes a difference to you.

Do you have a receipt for your charitable gift? The receipt indicates that you did not receive any goods or services in exchange for your gift. Be sure to keep your receipt with your tax records if you need an additional receipt, contact Youth In need’s Development Office at 636-946-5600.

Does your employer offer a matching gifts program? If your employer offers a matching gifts program, you can effectively double your gift to Youth In need. Many companies match gifts to their employees’ charitable gifts. Does your employer match gifts? Call Youth In need’s Development Office at 636-946-5600.

Do you have Federal income tax due? Youth In need offers donors an excellent giving opportunity with its Missouri State Tax Credit program. You may apply your charitable donation to your federal and state income tax returns and receive an additional 50 percent Missouri State Tax Credit on gifts of $100 or more.

Leave a Legacy for Generations to Come

There are several ways to ensure that your charitable gift keeps giving long into the future:

Join Youth In need’s Leave a Legacy Society by giving a gift to Youth In need in your will or living trust. Leaving a gift in your will offers an estate tax deduction for the value of the gift. Naming Youth In need as the beneficiary of assets in a living trust allows you to retain control of your assets and trust during your lifetime. Plus, there are possible estate tax savings.

Consider a gift through your retirement account or pension plan. Normally, these accounts are consumed largely by taxes. However, as a charitable gift, they may allow you to give more to Youth In need than you thought possible.

A life income gift can be a tax-effective way to provide yourself or someone you designate with regular payments for life.

Consider a life insurance gift. Naming Youth In need as the owner or beneficiary of a life insurance policy offers you an immediate tax deduction.

Creative charitable giving offers a variety of giving opportunities. It also allows you to honor someone special in your life by leaving a legacy for years to come. Contact Marissa Pulzisi, Youth In need’s Vice President of Development and Marketing, at 636-946-5600, ext. 254, to discuss any of these other giving opportunities.

Need is happy to help you complete the necessary paperwork with your employer.

Is your gift giving you the maximum tax advantages? Youth In need obtains additional tax credits by giving a gift to Youth In need. You may apply your charitable donation to your state tax payments to work where you want them,” said Jerry Daniels, retired Boeing President and CEO and Immediate Past Chairman of Youth In need’s Board of Directors. “A $100 gift to Youth In need reduces your federal and state taxes by more than $50 and also provides you with federal taxes by $15 to $35, depending on your tax bracket. So I put my tax payments to work where they do the most good.”

Please consider making a donation using tax credits! For more information about tax credits and how they work, please contact Marissa Pulzisi, Youth In need’s Vice President of Development and Marketing, at 636-946-5600, ext. 254.
A good fitness program offers more than just physical benefits for the teens living in Youth In Need's Transitional Living Program (TLP). It also builds self-esteem and faith that the teens can accomplish their goals.

The Fifth Street Club Fitness location in St. Charles has partnered with Youth In Need to offer TLP teens an outlet to improve their health and build self-esteem and confidence at the same time.

Twice a week, TLP teens hit the gym and work out in a group setting and one-on-one with their trainers. JC Sibala, Marketing Director for Dynamic Fitness Management (DFM), a personal training company that sub-contracts its trainers to area gyms, is one of those trainers. When Sibala learned about Youth In Need from former client Laurie Schoenereder, he saw an opportunity to make an impact in the lives of the teens in the agency. (Schoenereder is also one of three volunteer Master Gardeners who designed and implemented Youth In Need's Monsanto Fund Science Discovery Garden.)

"It took several months to get the program going," Sibala said. "Before you can do a real exercise routine, you should be between the ages of 15 and 16. This program was a great fit for the TLP kids, and it's an opportunity to help build their self-esteem and confidence."

TLP is a group home and scattered-site apartments for homeless teens, ages 15 to 21. In the program, teens learn independent living skills and are encouraged to be involved in an educational program as well as have employment. This, combined with individual and group therapy as well as a life skills component, helps the teens produce to productively and successfully live on their own after exiting the program.

Since Club Fitness contracts exclusively with DFM to provide trainers to its clients, Sibala is able to work the teens on Monday afternoons, while another trainer works with the teens on Thursdays. Club Fitness has donated the memberships so the teens can work out in the program.

"Club Fitness is locally owned and our community is why we've grown so much in the last five years," said Brad Bryan, District Manager with Club Fitness. "The community is an integral part of our success. We wouldn't be where we are without the community. Because of that, we try to get involved in as many community and charitable aspects as we can. Club Fitness is the gym for everyone, and this partnership was a great fit for our company."

But not every day is easy. To see Sibala training TLP teens, one would think he's worked with this age group before. And he has—as a youth sports coach. His approach in training kids in the gym is not unlike coaching kids at a sport. He often has to navigate tough days with the kids, gauging their interest and enthusiasm in the work outs. On those days, Sibala meets the kids where they are.

He is intuitive to each kid's personality and what they're going through at the time. He asks how they feel and offers encouragement as they push themselves physically. It's important that when they don't want to work out with the group that they know how to exercise most effectively and be safe while they are doing it.

"There are a lot of times that people don't accomplish their goals, because they don't think they can," Sibala said. "But we work on motivation, and the kids are empowered because they realize they can accomplish the things they set out to do. We wanted to bring that empowerment to kids who may not know what their bodies are capable of."

"When you set a goal, it often parallels other life issues," Sibala continued. "If you stick to it, and reach that one goal, you start to see how you can reach other goals, too."

Youth In Need's staff see what a difference the program has on the kids. "It truly gives them something to do with their time that is positive, active and fun," said Leslie Wiss, Life Skills Specialist for TLP. Furthermore, Wiss believes Sibala is in tune with what the kids need. "JC told me the focus is to improve self-esteem and not just strength building," Wiss said. "This tells me he really understands the clients we serve."

Youth In Need's staff, board and supporters turn out to congratulate Honor Programs award nominees.

Youth In Need staff, board members, donors and volunteers for their Saint Charles Business Magazine Honor Programs nominations. This year, the magazine celebrated its third annual Honor Programs, which recognizes St. Charles County non-profit executives, employees, board members, volunteers, youth and donors for their community impact. Youths In Need nominees included: Jim Braun, President and CEO; Anita Viehmann, Development Manager – Events; Robin Grimmich, Volunteer; Patricia Hernandez, Board Member; Carl Jung, Board Member; Herb Lesser, Board Member; QuikTrip Corporation, Donor; and Connie and Gene San Filippo, Volunteer.

Youth In Need's President and CEO Receives National Executive Leadership Award of Excellence

Youth In Need's President and CEO Jim Braun was honored at the Saint Charles Business Magazine's third annual Honor Programs with a Lifetime Achievement Award. The National Network for Youth presented grundation TLP Program (TLP). It also builds self-esteem and faith that the teens can accomplish their goals.

Youth In Need held its fourth annual Battle of the Brains Trivia Night on April 26 at St. Robert Bellarmine Catholic Church in St. Charles. Youth In Need sold 24 tables and raised more than $4,000 in support of the programs that serve the agency's children, teens and families. Trivia goers also had the opportunity to purchase balloons that held numbers for attendance prizes and $500 raffle tickets. For the first time, the event offered three special silent auction items that were up for bid: Tickets to the Indy 500, a Keith Urban-autographed acoustic guitar and autographed St. Louis Cardinals' photos.

Youth Update 1 3
Youth In Need celebrated National Safe Place Week March 16-22, 2008, a time for Safe Place programs across the country to recognize the countless volunteers, businesses and civic organizations that make Safe Place possible. Youth In Need celebrated the week with several milestones, maximizing the opportunity for outreach and community education.

Safe Place is a national crisis prevention program for children and teens. Youth In Need is the regional provider of this important community initiative. The program partners with local businesses to act as Safe Place sites. In the St. Louis area, all QuikTrip convenience stores and YMCAs are sites, in addition to many fire departments, the St. Charles City-County Library District, banks and Coldwell Banker Gundaker offices. All sites are designated by the yellow and black Safe Place sign. When children and teens need help, they simply go to one of the designated businesses, ask for Safe Place help and the business employee contacts Youth In Need to take over, and if necessary, pick the child up and take him or her to the Emergency Shelter. Children or teens may need Safe Place because they are homeless or runaway, on an unsafe date, locked out of the house, escaping a bully or experiencing abuse or neglect at home. For a complete list of Safe Place locations in the community, visit Youth In Need’s Web site at www.youthneed.org.

Youth In Need held a Safe Place poster contest for eastern Missouri middle and high school students. Area teens submitted designs related to the theme: Safe Place: Where Kids Get Help…. FAST! Winning entries will be featured in Safe Place marketing through the year. In addition, employees at select Safe Place sites wear Safe Place stickers during the week to raise awareness and emphasize Safe Place partnerships.

The National Safe Place office in Louisville, Ky., purchased movie theater advertising in select markets, including two St. Louis-area theaters, to run the week of and following National Safe Place Week. The ads featured National Safe Place’s newly launched teen Web site, www.safeplacefor teens.com, where teens can access Youth In Need’s Web site, resources and support features.

Youth In Need Dedicates the Monsanto Fund Science Discovery Garden on May 4 with a community celebration and an afternoon filled with fun and free activities for the entire family.

The garden, now in its second year, won an award from the National Gardening Association earlier in the year. The award recognizes Youth In Need’s garden as one of the top 50 children’s gardens in the country.

Youth In need’s garden got its start when Susan Rentfrow, a local volunteer master gardener, met a Youth In Need staff member at a volunteer fair. Rentfrow wanted to build a small children’s garden with just a few raised beds. Luckily, the Monsanto Fund stepped in at about the same time with a $50,000 contribution to get the garden started. In addition, the Ronald McDonald House Charities of Metro St. Louis contributed $10,000 for the garden’s play structure and sand areas. Rentfrow and fellow volunteer master gardeners Judy Wiegand and Laurie Schoenecker collaborated to design and implement the garden’s 6,000-square foot landscape design.

Their design includes:
- A three-tiered lot pond with waterfalls
- A gazebo
- A hand-painted tee-pee
- Compost bins and vegetable beds
- A vine tunnel
- Butterfly bushes
- A play structure and sand area
- More than 100 plants, trees and shrubs

It’s expected that the garden will serve approximately 1,500 of Youth In Need’s children and teens each year. An age-specific curriculum will engage children of all ages in learning about plant life, agriculture and taking care of the Earth. Likewise, the curriculum will guide Youth In Need’s teachers in how to integrate the garden into their classroom lessons. Specifically, the outdoor classroom allows children to experience hands-on learning about plant, insect and small bird life, as well as grow garden produce.

Youth In Need thanked Monsanto President and CEO Jim Braun, presentation of gifts to Monsanto and Ronald McDonald House representatives, a dosing song from children in Youth In Need’s Head Start program and the release of 100 butterflies into the garden’s landscape. In addition, a representative from Congressman W. Todd Akin’s office attended to share the Congressman’s well-wishes in a statement. He wrote, “It is my privilege, as a Representative of Missouri’s Second Congressional District, to commend Youth In Need for its foresight in planning and initiating construction of the Monsanto Fund Science Discovery Garden. This new facility demonstrates this organization’s strong commitment to provide quality education and care for the needs of a vigorously growing community.”

Throughout the afternoon, guests enjoyed educational presentations on butterflies and frogs from Tom Terrific and Sage Rentfrow. Grandmother Coyote told stories around the tee-pee, and children enjoyed face painting, garden crafts, games and a rabbit and turtle petting zoo.

Youth In Need extends special thanks to the following individuals and organizations who helped make the dedication a success: Saint Charles Cemetery, Holy Ice Cream, Ducheene Key Club, Susan Rentfrow, Judy Wiegand, Laurie Schoenecker, El-Mel, Manhattan Catering, Waste Management, Windsor Crossing Youth Group, Delta Zeta of Lindenwood University and Kraft/Phillips.

“I am amazed and proud of all the ways our community supports children and teens,” said Mayor York. “Certainly, St. Charles City, as well as the greater St. Louis region, is safer because of Safe Place.”

The presentation concluded by unveiling the winning entries of the Safe Place poster contest. The winning high school poster was designed by Orchard Farm High School senior Kiara Smith. The winning middle school entry was designed by a Youth In Need Emergency Shelter resident.

In honor of the National Safe Place 25th Anniversary, a second Web site now is available for youth service professionals and other caring adults. SafetyNet for Youth is a blog with eight youth service professionals nationwide contributing, and is a collaborative effort for discussion and communication about the at-risk teen population.

Youth In Need Believes in “Putting Kids First”

F ollowing the successful lead of St. Charles, Lincoln and Jefferson Counties and St. Louis City, Putting Kids First is working to get a sales tax initiative on the November 2008 ballot for St. Louis County voters.

A 1/4 cent increase in the St. Louis County sales tax rate (only one cent per $4) will raise approximately $40 million to provide the care St. Louis County children and teens need. The funds generated will be used solely for children in St. Louis County.

Half a million families in St. Louis County are falling through the cracks. Reduced local funding for mental health services and state deficits and cutbacks have left thousands of children and families with nowhere to turn for help. The Putting Kids First initiative will address the child abuse, neglect, substance abuse and mental health issues that are impacting the lives of nearly half the children in the community.

A group of non-profit agencies serving children and families in St. Louis County initiated the campaign. These agencies witnessed that many children’s needs were not being met due to lack of funding. The group of providers commissioned a needs assessment to quantify the unmet needs for mental health services in St. Louis County. The assessment revealed that:

• More than 12,000 St. Louis County children and teens in need of services were going without help.
• More than 151,000 children and teens were not receiving beneficial school-based prevention programs.
• The unmet mental health and substance abuse needs of St. Louis County children and teens were impacting 495,162 St. Louis County families.

If you live in St. Louis County, please help get this proposition on the November ballot! Tell your family and friends about the children and teens who need their help. Visit www.stlcockidsfirst.org to learn more about how you can sign a petition today. Also, if you would like to support this initiative by making a financial contribution to the effort, please make your check payable to Putting Kids First, c/o Lutheran Family and Children’s Services; mail to 8631 Delmar, St. Louis, MO 63124 and write “Youth in Need” on the memo line of your check.

Girlsfriends for Good

How did your group get its start?

We have been friends for a long time. Several of us went to high school together. Years ago, a member of our group had a son who became very ill when he was 6-months-old. He was treated at Cardinal Glennon Hospital. In the process, our friend learned about all the things the hospital needed but didn’t have. That’s how our group got its start. We did a dance to benefit Cardinal Glennon. We drew on our strengths and asked people for donations. Another friend in the group had a son with Down syndrome, and we split the money we raised between Cardinal Glennon and another organization. As our group grew, it became too hard to continue the work. People were involved in other causes, too, and individually we each do our own things. But I moved away and our group work stopped.

How did you first become involved with Youth In Need?

My mother-in-law was honored as a volunteer of the year. In 2008, Youth In Need honored Brecky Henderson with the Distinguished Individual Volunteer Service Award at its Thanks for Giving volunteer and donor recognition reception. I was awed by the outpouring of love from Youth In Need. Even though individuals were being honored, there was no ego involved, and I was so impressed. Shortly after that, I contacted everyone in the group to tell them about Youth In Need. I told them that we had to get involved with Youth In Need. Everyone was on board for beginning our work again. So, we decided not to do our usual gift exchange in December. Instead, everyone brought a check for Youth In Need.

What kinds of things does Girlsfriends for Good do?

We hadn’t done anything like this in so long, and most of us have grown kids. So, it just seemed natural to do something like this again. We did a happy hour baby shower and a school supply drive where we got together and everyone brought an item. Then we did a drive at a local school. We had a spa party, and everyone brought a personal care or baby item. Everyone was very generous, and it was cool to see how much we collected. We tried a monthly activity, where everyone was responsible for a month of buying baby wipes and things like that. This year, when we did our Christmas party, we started talking about the Shelter and how miserable it must be for a family to celebrate the holidays when you don’t have family around. We decided that we would start a birthday club so we could supply gift cards for the house to buy a cake, decorations and a gift. We just wanted to give the kids a little celebration and the feeling that they are important. The bottom line with our group is that we have fun and do a good thing, too. Everyone wants to do something good, but not everyone can donate a lot of money or time. But with this, we can make a difference. Our baby shower was great because not everyone who participated was part of our group. When you see everyone together and what the group is capable of doing with their contribution, it’s great!

How did you come up with a name for your group?

Everyone in the group submitted suggestions, and then the group voted on their favorite.

How big is your group?

There are about 15 people involved. We don’t see everyone all of the time because we’re spread out in the area. We always try to do dinner and celebrate milestones with each other. It’s pulled some women back into the group more often.

Is your group involved with other charities this way?

Right now, we just do this for Youth In Need. We’ve all agreed that we’ll stay with Youth In Need because it does so much.

What’s the best part about what your group does for Youth In Need?

The greatest part about Youth In Need is that you can feel the magic every time you walk in the door. You just have a feeling that it’s right. God is at work here. Our friendship makes it great, but we know that we’re doing something good for kids and families. We can have fun but we know we’re doing something for a good cause. It’s the best of both worlds. We feel we are blessed, but we know that there are families who need some help. And it’s great to do it as a group of friends.

Is there anything you want to add?

One woman in the group regularly e-mails Oprah Winfrey to talk about the group and Youth In Need’s work. We keep thinking it would be great if we could get Youth In Need a big check from Oprah. Even though she’s had no response, she’s determined to keep Oprah updated on what we’re doing.

Pam Henderson is a member and organizer of Girlsfriends for Good, a group of friends who regularly support Youth In Need through volunteer efforts and donation drives. Henderson recently answered a few questions about why she and her friends are so committed to Youth In Need.
Youth In Need to Launch New Web Site

Youth In Need will launch its new Web site on June 6. The Web site will further enhance Youth In Need’s ability to connect with the increasingly wide-spread number of clients the organization serves throughout St. Louis City and County and St. Charles, Lincoln, Warren and Montgomery Counties in Missouri.

Site features include a more-inviting appearance with updated graphics; a reorganization of information to make services easily accessible and identifiable to clients; customized tip sheets, specifically for children and teens; and an Intranet to unite Youth In Need’s 300-plus staff. Visitors also have an opportunity to make a secure online donation to Youth In Need via the new Web site. In addition, the site offers a content management system, which allows Youth In Need to make changes and updates to the site from any computer with Internet access. The redesign of Youth In Need’s site is funded by an AT&T Excelerator competitive technology grant from The AT&T Foundation.

In addition, guests who visit the site and register their e-mail address and contact information will be entered into a drawing to win tickets to an upcoming St. Louis Cardinals game. Be sure to visit the new site on June 6 to enter.

St. Louis City Head Start Celebrates Week of the Young Child

Youth In Need’s St. Louis City Head Start program celebrated the Week of the Young Child by holding a different activity every day of the week. One activity was a fieldtrip to Youth In Need’s Monsanto Fund Science Discovery Garden. The Week of the Young Child is an annual celebration that focuses public attention on the needs of young children and their families.

2008 Corporate Partners Make a Difference

Youth In Need’s 2008 Corporate Partners raised a record-breaking $109,000 in support of the children, teens and families Youth In Need serves. Youth In Need gratefully acknowledges its 2008 Partners, who generously support the agency’s programs through its annual Celebration of Youth and Golfing for Youth benefits. Together, we believe in the power of potential.
