Saint Louis Science Center Joins Safe Place Initiative

Growing up in today’s world can be tough on a child, especially when problems seem insurmountable and help seems scarce. But Youth In Need’s Project Safe Place offers troubled children and teens a beacon of hope in places that are as familiar to them as their homes—places like QuikTrip convenience stores, libraries, fire departments and now the Saint Louis Science Center.

Since 1983, throughout the country, businesses have come together to build a network of “safe places” for children and teens in crisis. The landscape is no different in the St. Louis region, where Youth In Need is the Safe Place provider of the national crisis prevention program.

The area’s program coordinator since 2006, Youth In Need now has more than 260 businesses throughout St. Louis City, St. Louis County and St. Charles County that have shown their commitment to the community’s children and teens by enrolling their businesses as Safe Place sites.

The Safe Place business commitment is easy. After completing a simple, yet thorough, training process, businesses hang the distinctive yellow and black Safe Place sign in their window. When a young person asks a business employee for assistance, the employee calls Youth In Need’s 24-Hour Help Line, where a case worker assesses the situation and sends a staff member to pick up the child and bring him or her back to Youth In Need’s Emergency Shelter, if needed.

The Science Center is a phenomenal addition to the businesses already serving as sites because it is a natural attraction for area young people. More than one million guests visit the Science Center each year, which means that children and teens have easy access to caring, trained and visible staff.

“Because the Science Center is family-friendly, centrally-located, and open seven days a week, it makes sense for us to offer assistance to children and teens in need. We recognize that many young people who visit us may feel more comfortable coming to our facility for help in crisis situations than other places,” said Marti Cortez, Senior Vice President for the Science Center. “The sad reality is that there are many kids who are homeless, experiencing abuse, neglect, fear for their safety, or have serious family problems. If they come to us and ask our staff members for help, we’ll start the process to find them a ‘Safe Place.’ If we are the link in the system that helps at least one child, it will be worth our effort.”

Young people may need the Safe Place program for a variety of reasons, including being on an unsafe date, experiencing abuse or neglect at home; dealing with a bully at school; traveling with a drunk driver; being lost or locked out of their house, among many other things.

To ensure that children know about Safe Place and how to use the program, Youth In Need offers free, age-appropriate presentations to school and church groups and other child- and teen-focused clubs.

To schedule a presentation or to learn more about enrolling a business as a Safe Place site, contact Karen Sieve, Safe Place Manager, by phone at 636-946-5600, ext. 251, or by e-mail at k sieve@youthinneed.org.

Gorgeous Weather Greets Golfers Teeing It Up for Kids

The 2008 Golfing for Youth Benefit Tournament brought pleasant weather to the 200-plus golfers who turned out to support the thousands of children, teens and families Youth In Need serves. Thankfully, the 100-degree heat of 2007 was left in the previous year as golfers got down to business supporting children and families. Youth In Need, along with Title Sponsor Smurfit-Stone, held its 11th annual Golfing for Youth tournament on Aug. 11 at Whitmoor Country Club in St. Charles. More than 200 golfers pooled their golfing skills and generous spirits to tee it up for Youth In Need, raising approximately $90,000. Funds raised benefited Youth In Need’s programs and services that provide crisis prevention and intervention services to more than 10,000 children, teens and families in St. Louis City and County and St. Charles, Lincoln, Warren and Montgomery Counties in Missouri.

The tournament was played in a four-player scramble over 18 holes in a competition format. Congratulations to Championship Flight First Place winners Jeff Viehmann, Dale Boggs, Jeremy Reidelberger and Mark Delcoux.

Golfers fueled their day with lunch courtesy of Youth In Need’s exclusive Principal Corporate Partner Culpeppers Grill & Bar. Following a full day of play, golfers cooled down with a social hour and open bar in the clubhouse and enjoyed an eclectic collection of silent auction items. Highlights included sports photos, autographed sports memorabilia, a bevy of baskets and gift certificates galore.

The day-long tournament concluded with dinner, award ceremony, check presentations, and live auction with KTIV Fox 2 Meteorologist Glenn Zimmerman, serving as guest auctioneer; and Carolyn Koenig, Chairman of Youth In Need’s Board of Directors, serving as program emcee.

Dear Friends:

In recent weeks, I’ve frequently been asked, “Are the current economic problems having an impact on Youth In Need?” My response has been, “Youth In Need will no doubt survive a tough economic period, but many of our clients will not.”

The vast majority of the children and families we serve have incomes below the Federal poverty level. They struggle even during times of economic prosperity. The current situation is hitting hard at the families who can ill afford for things to get worse. Incidents of homelessness among our families are rising. Our Street Outreach team is encountering more and more homeless and displaced youth. Families miss appointments and program attendance because they can’t afford to put gas in the car.

At the same time that services are needed the most, the economy is pushing Youth In Need and other helping organizations into “survival mode.” We wish we could expand services, but economic conditions prevent any consideration of expansion. State, local and federal government budgets are stretched and grants are either “flat funded” or in decline. In Youth In Need donars remain very generous, but many are not able to provide as much support as they had previously provided. We’re working to, at best, maintain our current level.

So what do we do in the meantime? First, Youth In Need pledges to manage its finances carefully to ensure that dollars are stretched without sacrificing quality, and that we serve as many people as possible. Second, we are working to expand our donor base. It is more important than ever that people who have not previously been charitably minded learn the joys and rewards of giving back.

What can you do? If you have been a Youth In Need contributor, we thank you and ask that you continue your support. If you have not financially contributed, please consider doing so now. Finally, please encourage your friends, family and co-workers to maximize their generosity.

To learn more about how to support Youth In Need, please visit our web site at www.youthinneed.org, or call Marissa Pulizzi, Vice President of Development and Marketing, at 636-946-5600, ext. 254. If you wish to support a large number of helping organizations at once, there is no better way than by supporting the United Way of Greater St. Louis. You can learn more about the United Way and its 2008 campaign at www.stlunitedway.org.

Finally, as you assess how you can help and encourage others to do the same, please keep the people who are struggling the most in your thoughts and prayers.

Youth In Need Celebrates National Night Out

Seven area Target stores partnered exclusively with Youth in Need to provide a St. Charles County National Night Out celebration from 6 to 8 p.m. on Aug. 5 at Youth In Need’s central office in St. Charles.

Hundreds of Youth In Need’s client families also enjoyed a free backyard dinner courtesy of Target and its many volunteer employees. Other activities and attractions included a bicycle safety course, complete with miniature road signs, put on by Youth In Need’s Safety Committee; a fire truck; K-9 and mounted police demonstrations; bounce house; National Safe Place booth; child identification kits and instructions; and free family fun gift bags. Youth In Need also collected new-things-themed items to assist the agency in providing services for the more than 10,000 children, teens and families it serves.

National Night Out is an annual celebration across the country that focuses on crime and drug prevention. Target was an exclusive sponsor of the 25th annual National Night Out. This sponsorship is part of the ongoing support Target provides to local communities throughout the country. Through its Target & BLUE program, Target supports local law enforcement by sharing information, technology and expertise while focusing on safety issues that affect guests, team members and communities. In 2007, more than 35 million people across the nation participated in National Night Out by attending their neighborhood block party.

“Youth In Need is committed to good community partners,” said Debbie Soriano, Executive Team Lead-Assets Protection for the O’Fallon, Mo., Target store. “That means getting involved with local organizations and offering our support. This year, seven area St. Charles and St. Louis County stores held a block party at Youth In Need in St. Charles. We celebrated with members of St. Charles City Police and Fire Departments, promoting safe, fun-filled activities for children of all ages.”

Locally, the seven Target stores (St. Charles, St. Peters, Florissant, Dardenne Prairie, Wentzville and O’Fallon, Mo.), and Alton, Ill.) promoted the event by including fliers in shopping bags prior to Aug. 5.

Youth In Need Launches New Web Site

Youth In Need launched its new Web site on June 6, revamping the agency’s 8-year-old site and offering new features for visitors.

Among the many improvements is a streamlined service information section, where visitors are able to easily navigate Youth In Need’s programs. Visitors now have the option of searching for programs based on the age they serve or by viewing an entire list. Likewise, an always-developing resource page offers children, teens and families community resources that address a variety of topics.

Interactive features are also at the top of the site’s new look. Visitors now have the ability to apply online for Youth In Need careers. Applicants can search for open positions based on program areas and then upload a resume and cover letter through the application module.

Visitors also have the chance to make donations to Youth In Need through the secure online giving feature. And another popular new feature is the photo gallery that houses photos from the agency’s special events and interesting program activities.

Thanks to friends at 62 Sports Group, Youth In Need held a contest during June. Visitors entered to win four tickets to a St. Louis Cardinals game and a $100 gift card. Congratulations to winner Nina Dunn of Bowling Green, Mo.

In the first month, more than 7,500 visitors checked out Youth In Need’s new site. If you weren’t one of them, be sure to visit online at www.youthinneed.org.
Youth In Need In Brief

Let Us Appreciate You
Save the date and join Youth In Need for its annual donor and volunteer recognition reception on Wednesday, Nov. 19, 2008, at Youth In Need’s central office, located at 1815 Boone’s Lick Road in St. Charles. The evening includes a special award ceremony, a pictorial tribute to the year’s events and refreshments. Be sure to watch for more information soon!

Have a Blast with Safe Place
Youth In Need’s Safe Place program will have a booth at the St. Charles Chamber of Commerce’s Blast event again this year. Be sure to join us from 3 to 5 p.m. in New Town for this fun, family event. The Safe Place booth will include games, prizes and program information. To learn more about the Blast, visit the Chamber’s Web site at www.stcharleschamber.org.

Get Started on Spreading Holiday Cheer with Youth In Need Cards
Don’t wait to get your Youth In Need holiday cards this year, because there are two exciting opportunities. Youth In Need will be unveiling a new holiday card design for 2008. Please visit our Web site soon to see the new artwork and message. Previous year’s cards are discounted to $5 for a set of 10 cards and envelopes. Each discounted design features illustrations from children in Youth In Need’s Head Start program. The first design is a yellow star on a blue background. The inside message reads: Wishing you a bright, star-filled holiday season. The second design shows two hugging friends. The inside message reads: Wishing you a holiday season full of friendship, laughter and peace. The back of both cards features Youth In Need’s agency information and logo. Order your holiday cards today by calling 636-946-5600, ext. 253.

Youth In Need’s Out-Of-School Time (OST) Programs celebrated the close of its summer session with a junior Olympic skills competition on July 16. OST students, ages 5 to 12, from Ford, Froebel, Mann, Oak Hill, Sigel, Waldrige and Woodard Elementary Schools participated in the basketball, soccer and track and field event. Each site designed and personalized T-shirts to represent their school and organized a special presentation for the event’s opening ceremony. Some students made and wore Olympic wreaths; others carried their creation of the Olympic torch. With T-shirts displaying the Olympic rings, the young athletes sang, performed step demonstrations and celebrated their physical abilities. At the close of the ceremony, each participant received a gold medal to remind them of the Olympic creed: “The most important thing in the games is not to win but to take part.”

The Primrose Foundation supports numerous organizations throughout the area. How did the Foundation get its start?
The Primrose Foundation grew out of my father’s life as an orphan and his discovery of his biological parents at age 80. In 2005, we went to the Child Saving Institute and found his original adoption paperwork. He discovered that his parents were orphans, too. Going through that experience helped him decide to give back to other children at this stage in his life. He personally realized how great the need was to provide for children. We didn’t realize how many children were in crisis.

What about Youth In Need made it an appealing recipient of the Foundation’s support?
We were looking for organizations that were well-run, had a good reputation and met the needs of what we were trying to accomplish through our programs. What solidified our interest was our visit to Youth In Need and the many people we met.

The Primrose Foundation is a different donor in that it has provided support through non-traditional gifts, such as gift cards. Typically, do you look for non-traditional ways to support organizations?
We have three programs. The gift card program provides agencies with gift cards to use for clothing, shoes and personal care items. We do a book program with one agency, and throw book parties. We work very closely with the staff to determine which books kids need. At the party, we bring snacks and my dad meets all of the kids and signs the books. And we have a third program that was just approved by our Board called Grandma June’s Kids. Agency staff can nominate a child to pursue something in the field of the arts. Foundation support helps the child fulfill a special dream or participate in an artistic event. Based on the staff’s recommendation, the Board evaluates which child to grant funding programs, the Primrose Foundation is committed to bringing comfort to children in crisis. Through three funding programs, the Primrose Foundation honors children whose lives have been disrupted due to abuse, neglect and other circumstances beyond their control. Patty Cross is the daughter of John Harper, the Foundation’s founder. She’s also the Foundation’s Board Treasurer. A-B Stock Donations Are Win-Win for Donors Helping Children and Families

In light of the recent proposed Anheuser-Busch sale to InBev, many shareholders surely are wondering what their options are in dealing with their A-B stock.

If the sale goes through, shareholders must have a cash-buyout of their stock, which gives shareholders a lump-sum check for the value of their stock at the time of sale. The difference between the original stock purchase price and the final sale price is subject to capital gains taxes. Specifically, the tax percentage is determined by the shareholder’s personal tax bracket.

This has shareholders facing a hefty tax on their stock sale. However, if a donor is considering a charitable gift to Youth In Need, a gift of appreciated stock, like A-B stock, is not subject to capital gains taxes. Additionally, a gift of appreciated stock also qualifies for Missouri State Tax Credits, which gives donors an additional 50 percent in tax savings.

Frank Megargel, Partner with Brown Smith Wallace, LLC, a leading St. Louis-based accounting firm and Youth In Need’s independent auditor, explained the benefits of donating appreciated stock, using one share of stock as an example. “If you gave away stock that you bought at $10 and sold for $100, you would avoid taxes on the $90 gain,” Megargel said. “A donor also would receive a charitable deduction for the $100 gift. If a person sells their stock first and then donates the money to Youth In Need, he would pay taxes on the $90 gain, but would still receive the deduction for the $100 donation.”

Megargel said it’s a better financial option for the donor to give the appreciated stock directly to the charity instead of selling first and then donating the cash.

Furthermore, according to the report Smart Giving: Maximizing Your Charitable Dollars Through Donations of Appreciated Stocks and Mutual Funds, American donors could realize $4.5 billion in additional tax savings if they gave appreciated securities instead of cash, but most weren’t aware of the tax advantages. The report also stated that almost three-quarters of all contributions made by individuals in 2004 were in the form of cash.

For more information about how to make a gift of appreciated stock, call Manissa Pulitz, Youth In Need’s Vice President of Development and Marketing, at 636-946-5600, ext. 254.

The above are intended as examples only and not tax or financial planning advice. Youth In Need encourages you to consult your accountant, financial planner or tax advisor when considering the personal benefits and consequences of a planned gift and a donation of appreciated stock.

2008 Corporate Partners Make a Difference

Youth In Need’s 2008 Corporate Partners raised a record-breaking $109,000 in support of the children, teens and families Youth In Need serves. Youth In Need gratefully acknowledges its 2008 Partners, who generously support the agency’s programs through its annual Celebration of Youth and Golfing for Youth benefits. Together, we believe in the power of potential.
